COMICS OF THE XIII CENTURY

The paintings that you will see on this route tell a story of the past. They are like cartoons from comic books, but drawn in the Gothic style. In them you can follow a story.

Keep in mind that in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, which is when they were drawn, most people did not know how to read. So the paintings had to be very educational, in order that whoever saw them understood the narrative. As you follow the illustrated journey, you will see crucifixions, martyrdoms, hell, funeral rites, and exorcisms. The painters wanted to steer the parishioners away from evil, and let them see what would happen to them if they left the righteous path.

The style is Romanesque, and the drawn figures are very expressive. But it is easy to see the narrative objectives of the artists.. The important thing is not the figure, but the scene itself.

This route is fascinating, even if you are not an art enthusiast. Keep in mind that the paintings were created so that people quickly understood what was happening.
