A GREAT ROMAN VILLA

What was the name of the Roman city in Los Bañales? We still do not know the answer. We hope that archaeologists will discover it in some of the forthcoming excavation projects. What we do know is that it was an extensive city spread over some 24 hectares, with thermal baths, an aqueduct, a residential area, a commercial zone, a forum and arcaded streets. It was located between the city of Caesar Augusta - the current Zaragoza - and Pompaelo, today called Pamplona. According to some chronicles it was a Foederati city, that is, a town to which ancient Rome provided benefits in exchange for military assistance. What can you see in Los Bañales? The Forum, the Domestic area, the Industrial Zone, the Water Supply, a Porticoed Street, a Necropolis, Roman Baths, and Funerary Monuments.

It is a unique opportunity to see how a Roman city was organized.
